

Texas State University Masters Program

The Department of Philosophy at Texas State University is accepting applications for the Masters program in Applied Philosophy and Ethics

(MAAPE). First-year students are eligible to compete for Graduate Instructional Assistant (GIA) and Graduate Research Assistant (GRA) positions with a first-year salary of $13k (9-months) and with the possibility of renewal for a second year. Travel support for professional conferences is available. Applicants who wish to be considered for a GIA/GRA position for Fall 2019 should complete the application for the MAAPE program by 1 March 2019 (<https://www.gradcollege.txstate.edu/programs/maape.html>).

The Department of Philosophy at Texas State University grants the BA in Philosophy, the MA in Applied Philosophy and Ethics, and offers undergraduate minors in Philosophy, Religious Studies (with a BA in Religious Studies to start in 2020), and Value Studies, as well as a graduate certificate in Professional Ethics. The department has over 40 full-time faculty members (<https://www.txstate.edu/philosophy/about/people/Philosophy-Department-Faculty-by-Specializations-.html>). Departmental activities include the Philosophy Dialogues, a program of 60+ public engagement events each semester including lectures, films, performances, and discussions, an active chapter of Phi Sigma Tau, an annual student symposium, an annual alumni banquet, and an Ethics Bowl team.

For further information, see: <https://www.txstate.edu/philosophy/courses-programs/graduate.html>, or contact the Program Coordinator, Dr. Alejandro Barcenas (ab75@txstate.edu).