Agency History/Biographical Sketch:

Travis Stimeling received their B.A. at West Virginia Wesleyan College, their M.M. in Music History at West Virginia University, and finally, Ph.D. in Musicology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Stimeling served as an assistant professor at Millikin University and is currently an associate professor of musicology and director of West Virginia University Bluegrass and Old-Time Bands. Stimeling additionally served as the Senior Editor for The Grove Dictionary of American Music (2013), is a book review editor for the Journal of the Society for American Music, currently serves as a series editor for West Virginia Press’s “Sounding Appalachia” series, and is on the board of the West Virginia Music Hall of Fame. Their research focuses on commercial country, Appalachian traditional music, and music history pedagogy, authoring books such as, Songwriting in Contemporary West Virginia: Profiles and Reflections (2018), Fifty Cents and a Box Top: The Creating Life of Nashville Session Musician Charlie McCoy (2017), The Oxford Handbook of Country Music (2017), The Country Music Reader (2015), and Cosmic Cowboys and New Hicks: The Countercultural Sounds of Austin’s Progressive Country Music Scene (2011).

Their most recent book, Nashville Cats: Record Production in Nashville, 1945-1975 (2020) was supported by the National Endowment for the Humanities, the WVU Faculty Senate, the West Virginia Humanities Council, and the Case Western Reserve University Center for Popular Music Studies. This book was inspired by their desire to understand how records were made during the Nashville Sound era from the perspectives of the musicians who made them and reveal the stories that were still waiting to be told. They began conducting interviews with many of the people who were in the studio during the Nashville Sound era, learning about the ways they developed their craft, their attitudes about music and their roles in it, and the lives they led outside the studio. As the project unfolded, they were surprised to find that their training in classical music and jazz were almost as important as their knowledge of country music, because so many of those they interviewed had similar training. They believe it’s one of the things that makes the book stand out: the way they shows how complex these musicians’ musical backgrounds were. Stimeling had been a country music fan for most of their life, and they have always had an interest in the people who are behind the scenes. They would read the liner notes and see who played what, or what studios were used for different albums. They were always intrigued by all the connections between session musicians, songwriters, and producers.

Scope and Content:

This collection consists of Stimeling’s digital audio recordings and transcripts of interviews related to his book, Nashville Cats: Record Production in Music City (Oxford University Press, 2020). These original interviews are between Stimeling and the musicians or relatives of musicians who played a significant role in establishing “the Nashville Sound.”
